Roughton Woods is the location of the find of wartime Mustard Agent cannisters in late 2017 which necessitated the intervention of the Ministry of Defence and the Defence Science and Technology Laboratory (Porton Down). The site has been subject to security arrangements (fencing and personnel) since that time. The current timeline for Phase 2 of the site remediation will see further works taking place during March 2018 to identify and remove any other debris from the immediate site area. This timeline is dependant upon the specialist MoD team not being required for any emergency situations that may arise. This decision will see the maintenance of the security presence on-site until this work has been carried out with the costs for the onsite security being met by ELDC for the final month of the project under its duties in regard to contaminated land remediation.
